

Ocean Animals

Today we will be...

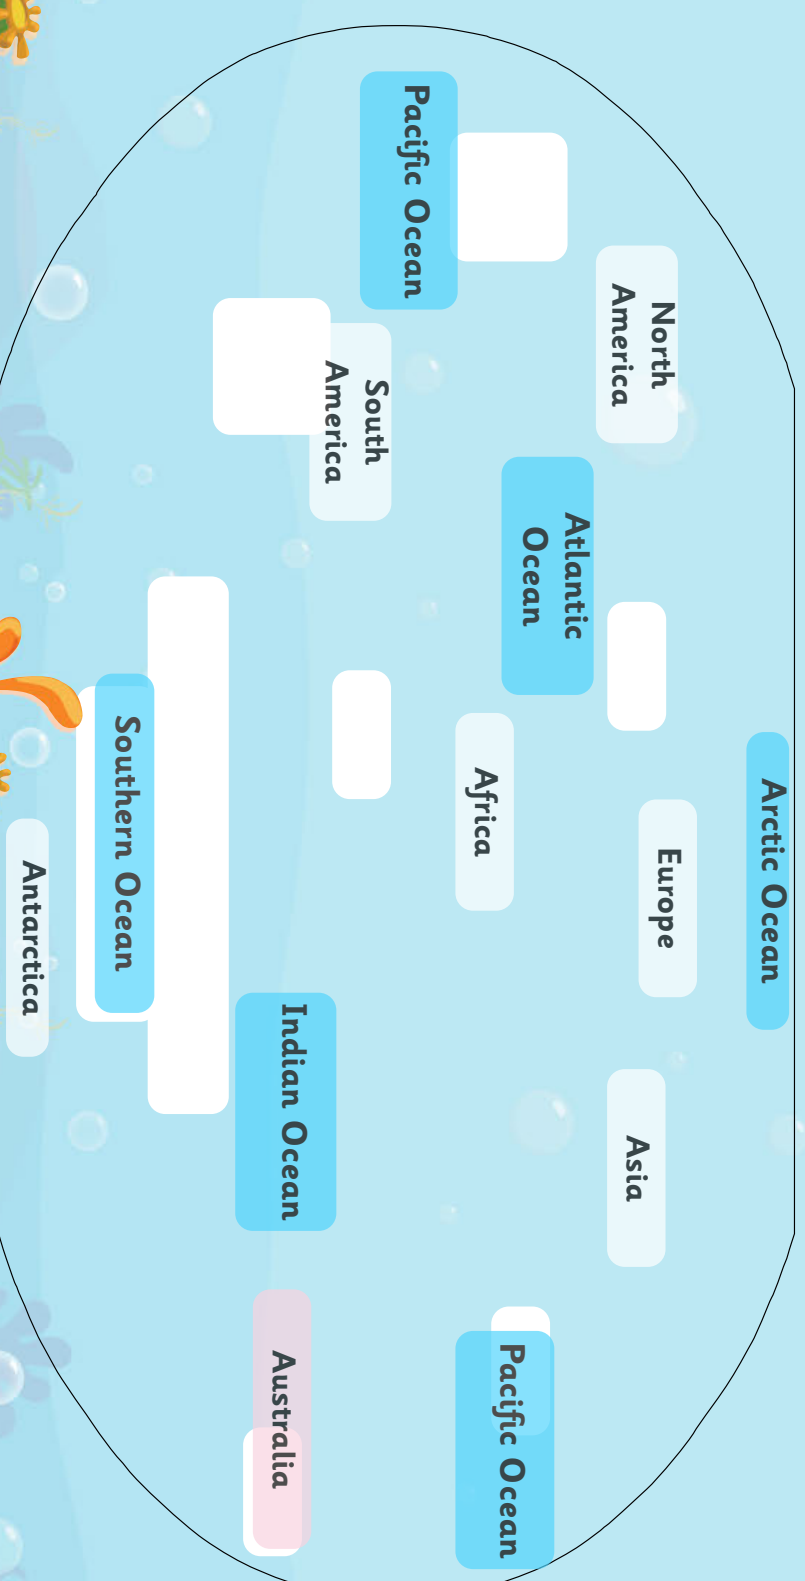

Identifying and describing some different animals that live in the ocean.

What is an ocean?

Have you ever been in, on or near an ocean before? What was it like?

An ocean is a large area of salty water. A lot of the Earth's surface is ocean. There are five oceans in the world, as well as lots of seas which are smaller areas of water.

Here is a map of the world. Can you read the names of the five oceans?

Oceans are teeming with plants and animals. We know about these plants and animals from scientists who dive into the ocean with special equipment so they can breathe. This is called scuba diving.

Why does this scuba diver have a tank on her back?
What is it for?

Let's go scuba diving!

You're going to see some pictures of animals.

If you think this animal lives in the ocean, swim over to this side of the room.

If you think it doesn't live in the ocean, swim over to this side of the room.

Are you ready? Don't forget to put on your goggles and snorkell!

We're going to look at some more ocean animals on the next slide. Look carefully at them. What do they have in common? What differences are there between them?

Scientists sort animals into different groups depending on what characteristics they have.

Fish

Lots of animals that live in oceans are fish. Fish have gills to let them breathe underwater and fins to help them move in water.

Reptiles

Reptiles have scaly skin. Most reptiles live on land but some live in the ocean. Reptiles can't breathe underwater so if they live in the ocean they have to come to the surface to breathe air.

Which of these reptiles lives in the ocean?

Which of these mammals live in the ocean?

Mammals

Mammals have fur or hair and give birth to babies instead of laying eggs. Mammals can't breathe underwater. Mammals that live underwater have to come to the surface for air, just like reptiles.

Invertebrates

There are lots and lots of different types of animals in this group. Being an invertebrate means you have no backbone. Instead, invertebrates often have soft bodies, sometimes with shells for protection.

Which of these invertebrates live in the ocean?

We've learnt a lot about animals that live in the ocean today! Well done everyone!
